The first thing a depositor naturally considers in selecting a bank is whether or not his funds will be safe.

He can judge this by the resources of the bank — by the relation between reserves and deposits — and by the business record and character of its directors.

Figures as to our resources and reserves are always available; as for our directorate, their conservatism and integrity are well known in this community.

Depositors in our SAVINGS DEPARTMENT also have the protection of United States laws.

FRANK E. LANGLEY, Publisher

Chicago becomes the object of all eyes this week.

Mr. Justice Hughes will have to say something this week.

When the other fellow hits you a hard blow, lay it to his "low visibility."

That entente offensive on the western front is about a month over-due.

Great Britain must fight on both land and sea. The time has come to make a strike.

If Great Britain is not the ruler of the North sea, why doesn't the real ruler come forth?

A contemporary likens Justice Louis D. Brandeis of the U. S. supreme court to President Lincoln. We hope no injustice has been done to Lincoln.

Winston Churchill must be about ready to eat his words about digging the German ships out like rats out of a hole. The rats have a tremendous bite.

A few more naval battles of the proportion of last week's engagement, and the United States will find herself the leading naval power of the world.

A description of St. Johnsbury's new $300,000 Methodist church states that the edifice "is built of Vermont granite with trimmings of Hardwick granite." Since when has Hardwick moved out of Vermont? Or what is meant by "Vermont granite"?

We quite agree with the Springfield Republican that Brandeis has shown good self-restraint in the face of great provocation; but we assert that to have entered into a wordy brawl with anyone would have been to defeat his confirmation by the Senate. Therefore, Brandeis' self-restraint was perhaps sustained by the feeling of self-preservation.

If Theodore Roosevelt should go into the Middle West this week and undertake a speaking tour, he could reasonably be suspected of playing politics rather than primarily furthering the preparedness cause. After the Republican convention concludes its work, he could go on the public platform and preach preparedness without suspicion of politics.

The 8,000 Britishers and Germans who went down with their ships in the sea encounter never had a chance at saving their lives; they couldn't even be captured as land forces are captured. Perhaps that is the reason why so much sympathy is extended to the families of the dead in a water battle while little thought is given to extending sympathy to the families of an equal number of men who go down in land fighting. The terror of the sea still remains.

The Barre (Vt.) Times objects to receiving letters addressed to Barre. But Sir James' books and plays are more famous than Vermont granite.—Concord (N. H.) Monitor.

But Barre desires to have an individuality all its own and hence does not wish to fatten on the famous writer's prestige. Barre stands on its own foundation. It is granite, the finest granite in the world for monumental work, and as famous in its line as are the books and plays of Barre in their province.

President Wilson having signed the army reorganization bill, which increases the peace strength of the army from 102,000 to 175,000, it now becomes incumbent on the government to find the suitable men to fill the vacancies in the ranks. The remarkably slow progress made in enlisting 20,000 men during the past few months indicates that the problem of enlisting 75,000 will be of considerable difficulty. Indeed, it may become necessary to increase the attractions of the soldier's life in order to fill the ranks to the full quota of men.

erale difficulty. Indeed, it may become necessary to increase the attractions of the soldier's life in order to fill the ranks to the full quota of men.

WHO RULES THE NORTH SEA?

After all has been said about the great naval battle in the North sea between the British and the German fleets, after the losses have been enumerated as far as it is possible to enumerate them and after the victory has been accorded by the naval experts to the one side or the other, the fact remains that the German fleet withdrew from the battle to the safety of its naval base, leaving the British still in control of the North sea. Had the preponderance of the German victory been so great as at first reported, about double damage being inflicted on the British to that sustained by themselves, the German fleet might have remained to finish up the work of destruction and eventually to cruise as the mistress of the North sea. But such was not the progress of events. After a battle lasting part of one afternoon and practically all the night immediately following, the German fleet withdrew from the conflict, leaving one of the larger vessels to fight it out with the foe and to take care of itself as best it could, while the major remnant of the fleet scurried to cover. That does not read like the story of a victor. The victor does not run away. It is for the vanquished to leave the battleground to the conqueror. The British remained, and while it would not be accurate to declare them the winner of the great battle, it would be equally inaccurate to proclaim the Germans the victor. The battle off Jutland was a standoff as far as the crown of victory is concerned; and the later reports indicate that the German loss, in number of ships, was not very much, if any, under that of the British.

"I've brought back those eggs you gave me this morning," said the new bride, as she began to take the articles in question from her basket. "They're duck eggs." "Duck eggs?" sneered the grocery boss. Preparedness Parade at Chicago Sings "America."

Chicago, June 5.—The Chicago preparedness parade Saturday was said by Maj.-Gen. T. H. Barry, commander of the central department of the United States army, who sat in the reviewing stand, to be the most inspiring spectacle he had ever seen. The great parade, in closed order, massed from curb to curb, rolled through the streets all day. It was as if the buildings were the banks of a river, and the marching thousands the current moving between them. The most impressive incident of the day was the stoppage of the whole line at 2 o'clock when the marchers joined in the singing of "America."

The official count showed that 130,234 persons, one-sixth of whom were women, had passed the reviewing stand.

NEW WOOD PULP SOURCE.

Product Now Being Made from Little Known Woods.

That satisfactory wood pulp can be made from a number of heretofore little known woods is evidenced by a U. S. government publication just issued, which contains seventy samples of paper manufactured by different processes chiefly from woods heretofore practically unused for this purpose.

It is pointed out that the spruce forests of the country are threatened with exhaustion and that the cost of spruce pulpwood has steadily increased. If the price of newspaper paper is to be kept at a reasonable figure, say the experts, more efficient methods of converting spruce into pulp must be developed or cheaper woods substituted for it.

The bulletin goes on to say that the method of manufacturing groundwood pulp has changed very little since its introduction into this country in 1807. It was with the idea of developing new methods and improving the old that tests were undertaken at the forest service laboratories at Vausau and Madison, Wisconsin. As a result, the relation of the different steps in the manufacturing process to each other has been definitely established and the merits of each treatment determined. The paper made from new woods was given a practical tryout by two large newspapers with satisfactory results.

The tests showed that eleven new woods give promise of being suitable for the production of news print paper, while a number of others will produce manila paper and boxboards. Most of these woods are confined to the West, while the groundwood industry now obtains the bulk of its raw material from the East. It is thought that pulp-making plants must eventually move to points where they can obtain a plentiful supply of wood and an abundance of cheap water-power, two prime requisites in the business.

The experts say that because the national forests contain immense quantities of the suitable woods and abundant opportunities for power development, they will undoubtedly play an important part in the future of the wood pulp industry.

25 DEAD IN WRECK.
